

DO YOU TRUST THIS PERSON?

Natural disasters create a unique opportunity for human traffickers to exploit victims for profit due to loss of homes, jobs and community support.

Were you promised a job or a safe place to stay, but it turned out to be something else?

Did someone offer you help after the disaster, but they will not let you leave or say no?

Do you feel like your movements and communications with others are being watched or controlled?

Are you scared that something bad will happen if you stop doing what someone asks?

Are you doing things you don't want to do to pay back a debt to someone?

Did someone offer you shelter, transportation, food or money in exchange for sexual acts?

Do you feel like you are in a situation you want to leave, but cannot, due to physical safety, financial stability or lack of resources?

If you need help, call the National Human Trafficking Hotline:
